

The right equipment will only get you so far.

Owner manuals don't always tell you what you need to know. And, the right equipment can only get you so far. Sometimes you need a little help from your friends. That's why the 3DSUG was established – to encourage and coordinate technical information exchange between owners and operators of 3D Systems equipment. Our forum provides a network for people seeking solutions to problems that involve basic modification to hardware or software. So, when you think you're gonna hit the wall just remember, high achievement is just one click away. For more information, visit www.3dsug.org.
